IN A TIGHT PLACE. Afrer several days silence the Journal of yesterday felt itself necessitated, we suppose, to say something upon the State debt question. On the 29th of September we proposed four inquiries to the Republican organ, and asked for fair and manly answers. We reproduce those questionsfor they are just as pertinent now as then:

1. If the bondholdess have not the right to demand payment of the State for the bonds is-

2 If the State is not in honor bound to pay or adjust this debt to the satisfaction of the creditors at the end of twenty years, is there any obligation on the part of the State to pay or change the character of the indebtedness and the rates of interest upon it-five and two and a half per cent .- at any future time?

3. If the debt is not due in January next, we inquire of the Journal if the bonds issued under the act of 1846 are not a perpetual loan if the State so desires it, at the rate of interest specified-five and two and a half per cent?

faith on the part of the State does not require last, remarked : that a demand of the bondholders of the funded debt for payment after the expiration of twenty years, shall be met by either its payment, or else a renewal of the debt upon terms which shall be just and satisfactory to the creditors?

After four days consideration, the Journal mustered courage enough to answer one of our inquiries, and only one. In reply to the fourth, be found in to-day's paper, says: "If the editor very moral concern. of the Journal will look back on his files only a few months ago, he will there find he then benext, and must be provided for, or the integrity of the State will suffer." Now, and for some unexplained reason, the same paper has changed to the opinion that the debt does not fall due at that time, and hence we must infer that the State is not called upon to provide for it. We have got one answer from the Journal and we stick a pin there. Will it answer with equal frankness, the other enquiries? If it will we shall then have a fair field to go on with the discussion of the subject, as a question of State policy, divested of party considerations.

The Journal takes the ground that the debt is not due in January next. It has not vet denied, and it cannot do so trutbfully, that the object of His Excellency in convening the called session was for the purpose of adjusting the funded debt of the State created January 19, 1846. The Journal assumes to be the organ of the party and of the State Administration-hence we have the right to accept its views as authorative. The paper has no individuality. It does not profesin its editorials to give the individual opinions of HOLLOWAY, DOUGLASS, CONNER, NEWCOMB, FLETCHER, HARDING, HALFIN and we do not know how many more attaches, but the principles and policy of the party it represents. Takit was to prevent some future Democratic Agent | will be seen, he heartily endorses: of State from embezzling the public money-. There is no evidence that the State has lost a dollar by either of the last two Democratic State which it cannot escape. Again we ask the Journal for a reply to our unanswered questions.

The Sentinel seems to have a keener appreciation of these facts, and argues, that when the State of Indiana issued her stocks to her creditors, and agreed to promptly pay the interest on the same, there was a reasonable presumption Boise City paper, will be interesting to many of that she would one day pay the principal thereof -that the debt was not a " perpetual loan," and that the good faith of the State requires, "that a demand of the bondholders of the funded debt, larger circle of friends and acquaint inces than is after the expiration of twenty years, for payment, shall bemet by either its payment or else a renewal of the debt upon teams which shall be just and satisfactory to the creditors "
